PURCELL'S "MANNING" REFUTED.

LIFE OF CARDINAL MANNING. With Critical Examination of E. S. Purcell's Mistakes. By Francis de Pressensé, a Freuch Protestant. Translated by Francis T. Furey, A. M. Octavo, pp. 214. Philadelphia: John Joseph RicVey.

M. de Pressensé shows beyond question that Purcell's life of Cardinel Manning is a faulty book. Its style is slipshed, its arrangement is dovenly, some of its statements are untrue, and many of its inferences that make against Manning are not justified by the evidence. This much, indeed, is plain to any candid reader of the life. Mr. Purcell reveals himself as lacking many of the gifts that go to the making of a successful biographer, and his incessant desire to project his own slapdash, ill-digested comments into the story he set out to tell is little less than a literary impertinence. The character of Manning was complex, and full of contradictions. He nearly always acted from mixed motives, and a just interpretation of his career, therefore, requires rare ability and insight.

I'm while M. de Pressense succeeds in proving Mr. Purcell's inherent unfitness for the task of writing Manning's life, he makes equally evident his own inability to draw a picture of Manning as he was. He makes much of Purcell's supposed malevolent desire to magnify the faults of Man-It is not to be denied that Purcell has laid himself open to this charge; but M. de Pressensé goes to the other extreme in his violent championship of the Cardinal. When all abatements are made, it still remains true that Manning's own letters reveal many flaws in his character. He was often an unscrupulous intriguer. No one can read his correspondence with George Talbot and fall to be convinced of this. Nor can his concealment of his belief in Roman Catholicism while he posed as a champion of Anglicanism, and his malevolent hostility to Newman be glossed over. It may be that the revelation of these and other episodes in his life by Purcell was indiscreet. But being revealed, there can be only one opinion held concerning them. Manning was a man of many noble and engaging qualities. He did much good in his day and generation. But he was by no means flawless. One can make great allowance for a loyal Catholic who comes forward to say a good word for the illustrious dead, and many such good words may be said of Manning. There is something even commendable in the desire of a Catholic to minimize as far as possible the unfavorable opinion that must be entertained in regard to some of Cardinal Manning's acts.

On the other hand, when a Protestant comes forward and out-Romans the Romans in canonizing the late Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster, we are compelled to record our disapproval of the act. Judicial impartiality is one thing, violent partisanship is quite another, and this eminent French Protestant reveals himself as a violent partisan not only of Manning, but of the spirit and genius of Catholicism. His antipathy to Anglicanism is especially pronounced, and he proudly admits that he has "a real sympathy for the very groundwork of Manning's ideas." Under such circumstances, his vindication of the Cardinal is worthless. His sneers at Protestantism and liberalism, his openly expressed contempt for "that stiff and formal clericalism" of the Anglican Church, from which Manning freed himself, and his blind exaltation of all things Roman, prove him to be a worse biographer than Purcell, for the latter at least gave his readers original documents on which they might form their own opinion. A true and judicious estimate of Cardinal Manning by a Protestant would not be without its value. Such a man might not say the final word concerning him, but he would furnish needed material for an adequate biography to be written in the future. In the brochure of M. de Pressense, however, is to be found only indiscriminate eulogy, and one rises from its perusal with a feeling of wonder not that a Protestant should try to do fustice to a great Catholic, but that he should seem so completely to identify himself with the point of view of Catholicism.

THE REAL THING IN SHERIFFS.

MR. DISHONG, FROM DE SOTO COUNTY, FLA., IS IN TOWN.

Sheriff Dishong, way from De Soto County, Fla. is in town. A sight of the Sheriff is worth the price of admission. He is the real thing in Southern sheriffs, and he isn't made up a bit. He stands six feet four inches, wears a sombrero and cowhide boots, and carries two big guns where it is handles to get at them. The Sheriff arrived in Jersey City yesterday morning. To him was attached by a handcuff a youthful offender named Albert Fullerton, who fied this State last winter when he had been released on parole from Elmira Reformatory To Fullerton was attached the stock in trade of department junk shop. Immediately upon arriving in Jersey City Sheriff Dishong telegraphed Chief Conlin to come over and meet him, but the Chief was busy with a trifle called the Raines law, and was obliged to send two detectives to represent him. The Sheriff, however, went to the District-Attorney's office to see about the requisition papers, and as soon as the good news of his arrival had spread all the notables of the city trooped in to be introduced. John Jacob Astor, Governor Black, Chauncey M. Depew, David B. Hill and Theodore Roosevelt were among the personages who fell over themselves in their haste to be presented. A New-Yorker would have said that all these men were disguised as office clerks, but the disguise was not apparent to the Sheriff. "John Jacob Astor" invited the Sheriff to come and stay a spell with him, and the Sheriff responded that he was "darned of he wouldn't."

The Sheriff will parade the city with his personal pulchritude for several days. the Raines law, and was obliged to send two de

He ran downstairs, seized Margaret, the baby of the Nunn family, and took her into an adjoining apartment. Then he tried to put the fire out with a basin of water, but the water, falling on the lamp, caused an explosion, the biazing oil scattering in all directions, and some of it striking Scanlan. A fire alarm was turned in, but before the engines arrived the fire had been extinguished by the neighbors. Scanlan was sent to Roosevelt Hospital in an ambulance. He is regarded as a hero by the people of the neighborhood.

TRADE AND FINANCE ABROAD.

The Greco-Turkish war has already exercised a Orient, as a consequence of the enmity shown to the Greek cause by the Berlin Government. It is known that in the Levant and in other parts of the Ottoman Empire the Greeks constitute the richest, most active, most industrious and enlightened element of the population. They hold in their hands the finances and the commercial transactions, and through them the operations of important export in those countries are controlled. To allenate the Greeks amounts to shutting off the openings of trade with the people in the Turkish provinces of Asia Minor; and this is what has happened to German producers and manufacturers, as shown in the special report recently sent to Berlin by the German Chamber of Commerce at Constantinople. That report says that Bismarck succeeded in establishing the economical preponderance of Germany in the Orient, after the Russo-Turkish war of 1877, thanks to his diplomatic policy, and supported by the somewhat unscrupulous spirit of enterprise of German manufacturers and drummers. But the Turcophile policy of the Emperor has caused the cessation of relations between the Greek merchants and their German sellers, not only in Greece, but at Sniyrna, Constantinople, Salonica, etc. Orders for goods have been cancelled, and Teutonic products are boycotted. The Germans, and on the road to occupy the first place in the markets of the Director-General of Custing the contract of the Custing est, most active, most industrious and enlightened

The latest report of the Director-General of Cus-tom Houses in Guatemala for the year 1896 states that the total revenue amounted to nearly $3,000,000. But in these figures are included about $2,000,000. But in these figures are included about $2,000,000 of duties paid to the custom-houses for the exportation of coffee. The value of products exported from the Guatemalan Republic was nearly $23,000,000, against an importation of foreign articles of $56,287,145. The total receipts of the custom-houses in 1896 showed an excess of $652,951 over those in 1895.

In Sicily great consternation is prevailing on account of the passage of the Dingley tariff by the House of Representatives. The clauses relative to House of Representatives. The clauses relative to the new duties on fruit are those which interest most directly the Sicilian exporters of oranges, lemons and raisins to the United States. Several merchants at Palermo have already suspended their operations, waiting for the final decision which may be taken at Washington regarding the scale of duties accepted by the House. Many laborers have been thrown into idleness at Moureale, Corini and other centres of fruit production in Sicily, and some disorders have occurred. The malcontents are clamoring violently for the active intervention of the Italian Government, to prevent the alleged increase of duties in America upon Sicilian fruit.

The municipal authorities of Buenos Ayres, in the Argentine Republic, have very often to confront strikes of all kinds, and they know how to fight them successfully with practical means. Refight them successfully with practical means. Recently the milkmen of the city, fancying that they had some grievances on account of certain municipal regulations, decided to strike. The authorities, mindful of the public health, immediately sent Alderman Capdevila to Montevideo, in the neighboring Republic of Uruguay, with instructions to contract there for any quantity of milk necessary to the people of Buenos Ayres. The precious liquid was transported on board a naval vessel furnished by the Intendencia, or Federal Government, of the Argentine province. The strike of the milkmen was brought to a prompt termination, thanks to the sensible and drastic remedy applied by the Buenos Ayres municipality.

Joseph Aron, who had formerly warned the French peasants and workmen in vain against the Panama craze, Now, M. Aron and the other patriotic and honest economists advise their countrymen not to sell their stock at the extremely low price actually prevailing. Without thinking that all the Transvaal mines are equally sound and profitable, they call attention to the fact that Barnato and the other British speculators, who disposed of their shares originally at fancy prices, are willing to buy them again at low rates, thus causing a frightful loss to the horde of small French investors.

SELECTIONS FOR THE CONSOLIDATED MEDICAL COLLEGE.

PROFESSORS OF THE UNIVERSITY AND BELLEVUE SCHOOLS MAKE THE RECOMMENDATIONS-

NEW SITE IN TWENTY-FIFTH-ST. The members of the Corporation of the University of New-York met yesterday afternoon in the Equi-table Building to elect the faculty for the consolidated medical colleges of the University and Bellevue Hospital. Mention has already been made in Tribune of the consolidation of the two colleges, which, combined, will form one of the largest and best-equipped institutions in the country.

The following members of the corporation were present: William Allen Butler, who presided; the Rev. Dr. Henry M. MacCracken, chancellor; W. F. Havemeyer, Dr. H. R. Dimmick, W. S. Opdyke, W. A. Wheelock, Charles E. Miller, I. C. Pierson, C. C. Miller, Dr. John P. Munn, David Banks and James McCreery.
Dr. Dimmick, who was chairman of the committee appointed to select the members of the faculty, presented the committee's report. The work of preparing a list had been long and difficult. The faculties of the two colleges numbered together about one hundred, about half of which number consisted of professors, the others being instructors and assistants. Both faculties had agreed without conditions that the University Corporation should elect the new faculty.

Each professor already in office was invited to nominate a list of those whom he considered best fitted for the places, it being understood that he would be nominated for his own place. Forty sets of nominations were returned to the committee. As a result of these confidential communications, about nire-tenths of the faculty elected yesterday received the support of the majority of the members of both old faculties. As compared with fifty professorships in the two colleges, there will be forty-one in the consolidated college. The following is the list of the professors elected, the departments of bacteriology and his-tology not being filled as yet:

Dr. John Pyxley Munn, dean and professor of edical ethics.

E. Le Fevre, secretary.

Dr. J. G. Adami, professor of pathology; Dr. H.

Biggs, professor of public medicine and infectious diseases; Dr. J. D. Bryant, professor of applied anatomy and clinical surgery; Dr. Austin Flint, professor of physiology; Dr. I. S. Haynes, professor of practical anatomy; Dr. H. P. Loomis, professor of materia medica and therapeutics; Dr. W. T. Lusk, professor of obstetrics; Dr. W. M. Polk, professor of gynæcology; Dr. A. A. Smith, professor of medicine; Dr. L. A. Stimson, professor of surgery; Dr. W. G. Thompson, professor of medicine; Dr. R. A. Witthaus, professor of chemistry, physics and toxicology; Dr. G. Woolsey, professor of anatomy.

Emeritus Professors-Dr. R. C. Doremus, Dr. A Emeritus Professors—Dr. R. C. Doremus, Dr. A. E. Macdonald, Dr. C. I. Pardee, Dr. L. A. Sayre, Dr. W. H. Thomson and Dr. H. G. Piffard.
Adjuncts and Assistants—Dr. J. C. Edgar, adjunct professor of obstetrics; Dr. J. F. Erdman, adjunct professor of practical anatomy; Dr. F. W. Gwyer, adjunct professor of surgery; Dr. E. Le Fevre, adjunct professor of medicine; Dr. J. A. Mandel, adjunct professor of chemistry; Dr. G. T. Stewart, adjunct professor of practical anatomy; Dr. I. Sickels, assistant professor of chemistry and physics.

Sickels, assistant professor of chemistry and physics.

Dr. J. G. Adami, appointed to the class of pathology, was formerly a professor at Cambridge University, England, and is now a member of the faculty of McGill University, Montreal. His acceptance of the place has not yet been received, and for this reason the allled professorships were not filled.

It was announced after the close of the meeting that Dr. E. G. Janeway had been invited to give certain instruction in the practice of medicine, and had signified his willingness to do so.

The University College has at present 344 and the Bellevue College for students. Since the consolidation of the two colleges the University acquired a first additional plot of ground in Twenty-already desired by it. This plot measures 100 feet in denth by 15 feet in length. The plan for its improvement contemplates two courts, with an east building, a center building and a south building. The first court, with the centre and east buildings, will be built immediately. Access to the court will be from the main door upon Twenty-sixth-st, through a wide corridor, descending from which by a few steps the student will find himself in a glass-covered court 40 feet in width by 55 feet in length. This court is devoted to the use of students as a conversation and social room. From all the floors of both the centre and east building. The great central stairway leads also to the uppe amphitheatre in the old building; while a doo from the court leads into the lower amphitheatr of the old building. The basement contains ampliavatory conveniences, also bleycle rooms, boiler rooms, etc. The first floor of the centre buildin is given to students coatrooms and to privat rooms of professors. The first floor of the east building is occupied by the reading-room an ilbrary and study room. The centre floor of bot centre and east buildings is occupied by class rooms, including an operative surgery room, whil the third floor contains a museum of anatomy, wit an anatomical theatre and a boneroom. ### ABOUT SOME VISITORS.

Senator H. C. Hansbrough, of North Dakota who is now in the city, defended the course of the Senate yesterday in constructing the Tariff bill. He said that not one out of a thousand of those who were abusing the Senate for the sugar schedule in the Tariff bill, and were talking glibly about the influence of the Sugar Trust, know anything about the matter, adding: "The sugar question is compli-cated, and I don't pretend to understand the entire effect of the schedule, but I do know that the Sen-ate is acting in good faith, and neither the Sugar Trust nor any other trust has any undue influence in the Senate. I do not place any credence in the sensational stories that Senators have been using

Dr. Guzman says that he does not credit the report that the insurrection of Honduras is over, and expressed the belief that if the insur gents have been checked at one point they will be heard from at another. He said yesterday that he knew nothing about the reported firing on the United States vessel Rover by a Nicaragua gunboat, further than what he had seen in the papers. "The gunboat that is reported to have fired on the American flag," he said, "was sent, I believe, to assist the Government in Honduras to suppress the rebellion. Doubtless the captain of the vessel will make a full explanation of his reason for firing as he did." Dr. Guzman had not much faith in the permanency of the federation of Central American States, explaining: "We have our separate understanding with the United States, and so have Salvador and Honduras. He saw the Grant parade and attended the dinner tendered by the Reform Club to ex-President Cleveland. Mr. Clark talks interestingly about his far-away home. "Tasmanla," he said, "is about as large as Ireland, and has a population of about 175,009. We have public achoels, a university and many modern improvements. I can remember seeing Joseph Jefferson play thirty years ago in Hobart, the main city of Tasmania, where I live." Mr. Clark said that he had no idea when the colonies of Australia would form a federation, like Canada. "In 1859 we had a convention," he added, "and a constitution was mania," he said, "is about as large as Ireland, and

MEETINGS AND ENTERTAINMENTS.

Moses Oppenheimer, chairman of the Fabian Society, delivered an address before the members of the Manhattan Liberal Club, at No. 220 East Fifteenth-st., last night on "The Employer's Lia-bility." Mr. Oppenheimer advocated the four fol-lowing fundamental principles as a basis for legisation on the subject: Indemnity should be granted for all accidents occurring while employes are at work; no contracting out should be valid; the original owner should be responsible for the sub-contractor; short proceedings in enabling settle-ments with as little delay as in the case of fire or

The Children of the American Revolution, Washington Heights Branch, met yesterday at the home of their president, Mrs. Ferdinand P. Earle, at St. Nicholas-ave. and One-hundred-and-Sixtleth-st., to make preparations for a lawn party and reunion to be held next Saturday, to raise money for the proposed monument in Continental Hall, Washington. Arrangements were made by which the 8th Regiment Band will be at the lawn party, and Regiment Band will be at the lawn party, and there will be fancy dances and an illumination in the evening. Among those present were Mrs. Earle, Miss Edna Keeler Shaw, Miss Marion Morris Hoe, Miss Anna Elizabeth Boyd, Miss Marcella Kremmer, Miss Heien Taylor, Lindwell Brooke Alexander, Royal B. Furnald, and about thirty others. This afternoon the Daughters of the American Revolution will also hold a meeting to make preparations for the lawn party.

At a meeting of the New-York Press Club last night delegates were elected to the convention of the International League of Press Clubs, which will be held in this city from June 1 to 4. The gates chosen are Ernest F. Birmingham, Archibald R. Brasher, Walter O. Eschwege, Edward T. Flinn, C. H. George, William F. Gilchrist, John A. Hen-nessy, Arthur L. Mackaye, Alfred E. Pearsall and Henry Wallington Wack.

The Queen's Diamond Jubilee Celebration Com mittee will hold a meeting at the Caledonian Clubhouse, No. 8 Horatio-st., to-night to arrange for a celebration of the jubilee here. The celebration is to take the form of a picnic, with sports, games, dancing and fireworks, at Ambrose Park, Brooklyn, on June 19.

At the annual meeting of the Psi Upsilon Club held last night at No. 64 West 39th-st. the following officers were elected: President, Dr. George Henry Fox; vice-presidents, Peter B. Wyckoff, Professor A. V. W. Jackson and Charles Herbert Shaw; treasurer, William M. Kingsley; recorder, Neuton E. Stout; secretary, Frederick A. Parkhurst; governors for the term ending May, 1900, Dr. Frederick H. Dillingham and Edwin E. Jackson, jr.; governor for the term ending May, 1896, Austin M. Poole; Committee on Admissions, Robert L. POWERFUL NEW BOOK ON THE "HIGHER CRITICISM."

THE ANCIENT HEBREW TRADITION AS ILLUSTRATED BY THE MONUMENTS. MODERN SCHOOL OF OLD TESTAMENT CRITICS.

By DR. FRITZ HOMMEL. Munich. Translated from the German by EDMUND M'CLURE, M. A., and LEONARD CROSSLE.

Prof. Hommel in this important work demonstrates the utter inadequacy of the purely literary methods employed by the so-called "higher critics" of the Old Testament. He has amassed a large body of new material against the Graf-Wellhausen hypothesis, which he has set forth in a most clear and convincing manner.
